The Tale of Garahel

"We are to set out tomorrow. I feel sorrow for Garahel, for he must leave Armina behind. Today, he presented her with a necklace – a token to remember him by. It would seem my friend has finally chosen a woman." ...

"Garahel has demanded our immediate return to Hossberg. News of the siege would be cause enough for our return, however, I believe my friend may have more personal motivations for this endeavor." ...

"We found Armina's body just outside of Weisshaupt. Garahel was in tears. In his eyes, all of Anderfels could not replace her loss. We will set out to Orlais to gather troops for the battle with Andoral." ...

"The blight has ended at last. And while the Wardens of Anderfels and the Free Marches alike rejoice in victory, I cannot join them. For Garahel, my greatest friend and ally, has given his life to slay Andoral. Perhaps he will once again be reunited with Armina. May the Maker bless him and watch over his soul."
